Finding good Pepakura files is not hard. Google search "Foam Iron Man Helmet Pepkura Files". If anyone tries to sell you Pepakura files, they are scamming you. Before you download the Pepakura files, you need to download Either Pepakura Viewer or Pepakura Designer. Both are free, but Pepakura Designer enables you to scale your builds. Scale? What does that mean? Scaling is basically changing the dimensions of a 3D model so that it fits you. Once you have Pepakura Viewer/ Designer and your Pepakura files, you can print the files out onto paper. *do not try to print on foam, it doesn't work. (duh) Find something memorable, join a community doing good. When all of your pieces are cut out, it's time to put it all together! It may seem a little daunting at first as it might not be initially clear what pieces go where but hopefully, the images will guide you in the right direction and each piece is labeled to help show what piece goes where. To join your pieces, you've gotta stick 'em together of course! Your choice of adhesive is critical here as the quality of the joins depends on your adhesive and your skill level. I'm using contact cement to apply my pieces together. It's extremely strong, it's a flexible adhesive, it's relatively easy to work with and the joining is near seamless if lined up properly. You can use hot glue if you wish as many people are familiar with hot glue, I just personally prefer the results of contact cement. To use contact cement, both contact points of foam needs a small amount of contact cement applied. Both sides are left to dry for 5 minutes and when both sides are tacky, join the pieces and the glue will bond instantly. Read the label as different contact cements may behave differently. I like to start with the faceplate of the helmet as it's easy to make out. Simply line up your pieces and glue together; a good idea is to test your adhesives and your skill on gluing, using scrap pieces and seeing what results you get, plus you can get some practice out of it too! To shape the foam pieces, a heat source is needed to shape the foam; that's where the heat gun comes in. The foam becomes pliable when heat is applied and can be formed into shape with your hands; just heat the piece, form it and let it cool down. If you didn't get the shape you want, just reheat and try again. From the faceplate, I glued the top piece of the helmet together, then the sides and then the mouth area. I left the back pieces last as they required more attention in my case. The foam was too thick for some areas so I had to trim off half of the foam on the edges with enough space for the extra amount to glue onto. Using the templates I provide shows what areas need to be trimmed to the correct thickness. PLEASE READ: PEPAKURA FILE TEMPLATES AND THE PEPAKURA DESIGNER SOFTWARE NEEDED TO USE THESE FOAM COSPLAY TEMPLATES ARE IN .PDO FORMAT AND RUN ON A WINDOWS PC ONLY.  PRODUCT FILE LINKS ARE SENT TO THE EMAIL YOU USED AT CHECKOUT.
